This is a very stressful time of year for me. It is in my nature to really dislike asking for favors. Here and now I must not only ask you for a favor but ask you to for money. SafetyLit needs your help. Our annual budget is about US$18,000. There are no personnel costs. Most of that amount goes toward paying for keeping our web server online and keeping our operating software up-to-date so that hackers cannot highjack our equipment for evil. SafetyLit has about 35,000 unique visitors each month, about 90% of whom visit multiple times. If half of our unique visitors contributed one US dollar each year, our costs would almost be covered. But that doesn't happen. Potential large donors refuse to consider giving to SafetyLit because we cannot recover our minimal operating costs from our users. It appears to these potential large donors that even our regular users don't highly value SafetyLit's services. They look at our tax forms (you can see them yourself from the SafetyLit home page) and note that I, David Lawrence, contribute more than half of the donation total. SafetyLit needs a full-time administrator, we need a volunteer coordinator who can help expand our coverage from journal articles to other publication types (technical reports, theses, etc.). Currently, SafetyLit operates on my volunteer hours and donations. I would like SafetyLit to continue after I can no longer do the job. That will require a staff and having a staff will require major donors. The first step toward finding a willing major donor is to receive contributions from users that will meet our basic operating costs.

Please donate to SafetyLit before the end of 2017. Use the link on the SafetyLit homepage to support the SafetyLit Foundation via PayPal. Even better, send SafetyLit a check to:
